

What Is Permaculture?

Permaculture is a holistic system of design based on direct observation of nature, learning from traditional knowledge, and the findings of modern science. It is intended to establish a resilient approach to living based on positive, productive relationships between multiple communities: microbial, plant, animal and human.

As such, Permaculture is the ground-up, grassroots embodiment of the Unitarian Universalist concept of the Interdependent Web of Life.

Join us for a conversation with Tom Gibson, recipient of the Unitarian Universalist Ministry for the Earth Award, as he shares his experiences with Permaculture and the green sanctuary projects the First Unitarian Church of Cleveland created . . . June 10, 7pm Fessenden Hall, Unitarian Universalist Church of Kent, 228 Gougler Ave., Kent, Ohio. All are welcome. Come dream with us about the growing UUCK campus as we live into our 7th principle.

Members of First Unitarian Cleveland constructed a permaculture garden as a way to express one of our core Unitarian Universalist principles: Respect for the Interdependent Web of Life. Learn more about their project by visiting their web page.
