

"CAN YOU SEE ME IN THESE WORDS?"

An Interactive Panel Presented by the ID13 Prison Literacy Project

ID13 is devoted to providing a voice, an outlet, and a platform for both currently and formerly incarcerated people. From our writing workshops on the inside to public events on the outside, we use creative expression to connect people through the prison walls.

This panel will include formerly-incarcerated writers, ID13 workshop facilitators, local poets, and Kent State scholars. Conversations will not be organized around questions, but around writing prompts, which everyone in attendance are encouraged to respond to. Our guest speakers will then use these artistic creations to spark discussions about art, incarceration, and re-entry.

Attendants can also grab free writing pads, pens, chapbooks, bookmarks, pins, and more!

Tuesday, April 23rd | 6:30 - 8 PM

Room 120, KSU Center for Architectural and Environmental Design

This event is made possible by support from the KSU Sociology Department, Wick Poetry Center, Kent Books to Prisoners, Ohio Prison Arts Connection, and Writers in Residence
