

Racial Justice as Spiritual Work

Through readings, music, reflection and discourse, worship services allow individuals and communities to explore more deeply what matters in life. We firmly believe that racial justice matters for all lives, and that working for racial justice feeds the soul and lifts the spirit. Sunday services coordinated by ministers, guest speakers, adult and youth congregants frequently center on racism and racial justice.

